

ThumbPRINT

A Good Mix of Fun from Your Locally Owned Printer.

THE 'FIRE IN MY BELLY'
WHEN I FIRST STARTED, EVENTUALLY TURNED INTO AN ULCER.

My fitness tracker
congratulated me for walking 10,000 steps.
It was just me pacing
around the house trying to remember what I came in for.

Cashier: "Would you like to round up for charity?"
Me: "Only if I can round
myself down for taxes."

WILL YOU ACCEPT
COOKIES?

SURE, IF THEY'RE CHOCOLATE
CHIP.

A man went to the doctor
and said, "I've been bitten
by a wolf."
The doctor asked him,
"Where?"
The man replied, "No, just an ordinary one."

To the optimist, the glass is half full. To the pessimist, the glass is half empty.
To the IT guy, the glass is twice as big as it needs to be.

NO, THAT'S NOT A CONSTELLATION.
THAT'S JUST A CLUSTER OF SATELLITES.

A little girl was watching
her dad repair his tractor.
She asked, "What happens to old tractors
when they stop working?"
Her mom sighed and told her daughter, "Someone sells them to your father."

Doctor: "Are you experiencing any stress?"
Me: "Only when I'm conscious."

I bought one of those smart fridges. Now it judges me every time I
open the door after 10
p.m.

My plants are thriving.
It's incredible what they can do when I forget
they exist.

I'm starting a course called: "How to Deal With Life's Disappointments."
I got the first lesson in the mail yesterday.
It was an empty envelope.

A telemarketer called
the other day and asked to speak to whoever runs the household. So I passed the phone to my dog.

NO AURORA BOREALIS
UNTIL YOUR HOMEWORK
IS DONE.

SIGNS YOU'RE OFFICIALLY IN FALL MODE

You've Googled "easy chili recipes" twice this week.

Your print projects now
involve plaid.

You've said "Let's do this
before the holidays hit"
about three completely
unrelated things.

You've had a very specific conversation about gourds.

You said, "It's spooky season" in a meeting ... and no one blinked.

You've stood in the candle
aisle debating between
"Harvest Spice" and
"Warm Flannel."

You switched out your front door wreath and felt very accomplished.

You've uttered the phrase,
"It just feels like soup
today."

Halloween candy "for the kids" has already been opened ... twice.

You've said, "You can't get cider like this in the store"
while holding a cup of cider.
